THE ADMINISTRATION OF AMESTHETICS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Having read with much interest your report of the evidence given by members of the medical profession in the case of Ann McGlenan, who died from the effects of evidence given by members of the medical profession in the case of Ann McGienan, who died from the effects of chloroform at Believue Hospital, I desire to state for the benefit of medical gentlemen who are in the habit of administering the above ansethetic agent, and for the prevention of similar accidents, that during an extensive experience, comprising sixteen years of medical and surgical practice, I have found one infallible test for the safety and protection from danger of the patient during the administration of chloroform. It is the condition of the pulse. For instance, from the first inspiration of the namethetic vapor up to a certain point the pulse Proping in the reached, is maintained the patient is safe, and the inhalation may be cautiously continued for an indefinite period of time; but the moment the pulse shows a diminution in either volume or rapidity, it must be instantly suspended. This failure of the pulse occurs suddenty, and indicates plainly enough that the nervous wires from the corebral bettery are incapable, to a greater or less extest, of transmitting vital force to the organs most essential to life. The pulse them in all cases should "be taken" before chloroform is inhaled, and during its exhibition abould be carefully watched by a person of experience. Three inspirations of the vapor after the pulse indicates failure may be sufficient to seal the doom of the patient. By giving the above publicity through the medium of your extensively circulated journal, future accidents may be avoided.

General W. D. Wood.

The St. Louis papers announce the death or this gentleman, after a painful and protracted illness, on Saturday afternoon, the 2d instant. The deceased was a native of Ohio, but removed to St. Louis about twenty years ago, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. On the breaking out of the war he was appointed a member of Governor Gamble's staff, with the rank of colonel, and commanded a regiment in Missouri during the first month of the context. In 1833, when the United States army sntered Arkansas, Colonel Wood accompanied it, in command of a regiment, and for a portion of the time in command of a brigade. For meritorious conduct he was promoted to a brigadiership soon after the close of the war; but as the context had entirely crassed, he resigned his commission, and returned to mercantile pursuits. In 1865 he was elected President of the Occidental Insurance Company, the charter of which had been obtained through his efforts. He leaves a wife and two children, together with a large number of friends, to mourn his loss.
